FLAHAHAN LAW OFFICES

A FAMILY TRADITION OF LAW

To say Kevin Flahavan feels at home in his new Westlake Village office would be an understatement. He literally grew up in a law firm. The son of William Flahavan, lead author of the "Personal Injury Practice Guide," was just 8 years old when his dad turned part of the house into an office. He believes it is a big reason for his firm's success.

"I remember all of the clients who would come to the house," says Flahavan. "Without fully understanding the circumstances, I think I just associated them with friends and family. That mentality is something that has always stayed with me. I want to represent each of my clients just as I would my own family members."

There was never a shortage of great attorneys around either. Flahavan is the godson of Tom Girardi of Girardi Keese and went to elementary school with the daughter of Larry Grassini of Grassini Wrinkle & Johnson. In 2016, he handled separate cases with each of their firms.

"These are people I've always looked up to," says Flahavan. "You can learn a hundred things just from being around them for ten minutes. They each have their own unique style or way of doing things that make them great, but I think the one thing they have in common is a genuine care for their clients and a love for this profession. I like to think that's one thing I share with them."

Personal injury law has become the Flahavan family business. Kevin's older brother, Brian Flahavan, has a firm in Northern California, which allows the Flahavans to handle cases throughout California.

"My brother and I were extremely lucky to have such great parents," says Flahavan. "They just wanted us to do something that we were passionate about. I think we saw how much our dad loved his work and his passion really rubbed off on us."

Kevin Flahavan's passion has been noticeable throughout the legal community. It's one of the reasons why he was recently elected to the Ventura County Trial Lawyers Association Board of Directors.

In addition to his practice, Flahavan is passionate about animals. He is a sponsor of the Ventura County Sherriff's K9 Golf Tournament and, as you can see, loves Dobermans.
